Won't Issue Restraining Order

Student Court Drops Case

By ROSEMARY KENDRICK
(Of The Capital Times Staff)

The Student Court at the University of Wisconsin this morning adjourned a hearing before considering whether it should order students to refrain from obstructing future job interviews on campus.

Ten students had been subpoenaed to appear and show cause why they should not be so restrained. However, the chief prosecutor, Ray J. Riordan Jr., moved to withdraw the show-cause order.

Riordan gave two reasons for his request for dismissal:

✓ The Central Intelligence Agency's decision to cancel its Nov. 27 and 28 job interviews on campus.

○ Confusion over U.S. Dist. Judge James E. Doyle's decision Thursday regarding University discipline of students involved in the Oct. 18 demonstration against the Dow Chemical Co. "We don't want to be held in contempt of court," Riordan said.

Later, Riordan expressed regret for the CIA's decision, "since by giving in to the demands of the students and cancelling the interviews, the problem that will have to be faced when the CIA finally does come will be greatly multiplied."

He said action would be taken "if students demonstrate an intent to disrupt or obstruct any future interviews."

Ronald J. Tropp, defense counselor, told The Capital

Times "The action which was brought in court today has absolutely no foundation. This is clearly evident from the constitution of the Student Court.

"I think this suit can only be termed harassment by the administration."

Tropp said he would submit a brief to the effect that no similar actions may be brought before the Student Court in the future.

Students who were called are William Simons, Robert Zwicker, Robert Swacker, Mana Jennings, Douglas Anderson, David Goldman, Robert Cohen, Robert Weiland, Carlos Joly, and Paul Soglin. Several student organizations also were served with papers.
